

American Indian Studies

AIS 6010 Seminar Series

Seminar Schedule

September 8th

Bernard Perley, Visiting Associate Professor (University of Wisconsin-Madison), American Indian Program
"Worth a thousand words: Linguistic anthropology and emergent cosmogonies"

September 22nd

Fredric Gleach, Senior Lecturer and Curator of the Anthropology Collections
"Warfare, violence and aesthetics: Seeking an Algonquian understanding"

October 6th

Morgan Ruelle, Ph.D. Candidate, Natural Resources.
"Practicing food sovereignty: Spatial analysis for an emergent food system"

October 20th

Susan Taffe, Ph.D. Candidate, Musicology
"Haudenosaunee's Decolonizing Musical Tradition"

November 3rd

Michael Carpentier, Ph.D. Candidate, Anthropology
"The Ways Speakers Right, Agency and Identity in Linguistic Representation"

November 17th

Jon Parmenter, Associate Professor, Department of History
"Seventeenth Century Iroquois Settlement Ecology: Creating a Landscape of Engagement"

December 1st

Karim-Aly Kassam, International Associate Professor of Environmental and Indigenous Studies Department of Natural Resources & American Indian Program
"The Role of Values in Adapting to Change"

Wednesdays: 10:10-11:40 a.m.

Location: 400 Caldwell Hall

Graduate-level course introducing students to ongoing research in the field of American Indian Studies in a Proseminar / Colloquium format. Advanced graduate students are expected to present their work in progress; all are expected to attend each seminar and provide presenters with critical and constructive commentary on papers.

image from www.fromancienttimes.com

AIS 6010 Coordinator: Karim-Aly Kassam, Director of Graduate Studies, American Indian Studies and International Associate Professor of Environmental and Indigenous Studies, Department of Natural Resources.
Tel.255-9757 Email:ksk28@cornell.edu

AMERICAN INDIAN PROGRAM, 4TH FLOOR, CALDWELL HALL, ITHACA, NY 14853

ph 607-255-6587 | fx 607-255-6246 | <http://aip.cornell.edu/>